Battle. THE DEATH OF MRS. WATSON

Grandmother of Judge Watson, of Chesterfield-W. T. Bailey Dead.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch, No. 1102 Hull Street. Not since the great political battle for votes year ago, when City Sergeant J. G. Saunders was elected over seven oppothere been such interest shown in the election of a city official as is being manifested in the selection of a sanitary officer in keeping with the Moore ordi-

There are about fourteen candidates for the position, and each candidate is soliciting the patronage of his friends. It is up to the joint session of the City Council to select the man who is to look after the sanitary conditions of Man-that he discharges his duty whout fear or favor—he will have more people abusing him than any official now has to contend with," continued the city father. Years ago, when the death of Mr. Ferguson required the election of a city sergeant, there were about as many names suggested for the place as are applicants for this place. The difference then was that the city sergeant was to be elected by the people, while the sanitary officer is to be chosen by the members of the Council. Dick Saunders won out with ease over all of his opponents, and since that time no man in the city has had the temerity to run against him. He is one of the strongest men in Manchester at this time.

Mr. James Baber is a candidate for the position of sanitary officer, and he between that he will be successful in his fight for the place. He is thoroughly acquainted with the city, is a man of determination, and is personally known to almost every member of the Council. But there are other men to consider, and they all say that they will win.

Several witnesses for the Commonwealth were examined, from none of whom was anything elicited to weaken the story told by young Stebbins, who claims that the shooting was accidental—the story told by young Stebbins, who claims that the shooting was accidental-unless, indeed, the fact of his giving conflicting accounts of the tragedy may be regarded as casting some doubt upon the story which he finally adopted as the correct version of the occurrence, and which is as follows:

The Fowler boy asked Carroll to let him have the gun, and the latter started to break it to take the shells out before handing it over, when the gun exploded, the whole load striking the Fowler boy in the head, killing him almost instantly.

YoungStebbins produced a favorable impression on the witness stand, in kylte of his admission that he had at first, in fear of the possible consequences of him of the terrible accident, denied all knowledge of the killing, and it is generally believed that he has given a correct account of the affair, and that he will be acquitted when the case comes up for trial at the April term of the Circuit Court, until which time he has been admitted to bail.
